Looking forward to the decade ahead, the American Council on Gift Annuities seeks to do even more by:

• expanding its reach across the nonprofit community in the United States
• partnering on key initiatives in the philanthropic community
• co-sponsoring research endeavors with allied organizations
• encouraging increased consumer awareness
• increasing the expertise and ethical practices of those engaged in nonprofit fundraising and partners in the for-profit sector

As a voluntary association, the American Council on Gift Annuities relies on the annual dues of its sponsors for its operating budget. In order to secure its future and concurrently embark on new initiatives, the American Council on Gift Annuities seeks to build an endowment fund.

BUILDING AN ENDOWMENT

ACGA has recently committed to a capital campaign seeking $500,000 in endowment funds for purposes beyond the capacity of its operating budget. Numerous nonprofits fail to utilize the services of ACGA due to limited funds, lack of awareness, and intimidating regulatory concerns, thus depriving themselves and their donors of a valuable philanthropic resource.

Commitments to the ACGA Endowment Campaign may be made in the form of:

• outright gifts
• multi-year pledges
• donations of securities
• distributions from IRAs or retirement accounts
• grants from foundations or donor advised funds
• donations of speaking fees/royalties

The ACGA endowment will supplement existing activities and services by:

• enhancing active participation in legislative and regulatory processes pertaining to charitable gift annuities;
• promoting institutional, professional and donor awareness of the services of ACGA as a valuable tool for the long term financial and charitable benefit of all parties;
• recruiting and training of planned giving professionals in the use of charitable gift annuities to secure the future of donors and charitable institutions;
• and providing outreach to senior leadership and investment professionals within charitable organizations to encourage sound administrative and investment policies within those organizations.

Gifts may be made in honor of or in memory of an individual or in tribute to current or former directors of the ACGA.
